They also serve . . .

Who can measure the effort or count the hours that keeps an airplane flying? Effort and hours that cover pre-fighting, fueling, and thorough checking at all times of the day and night, for the ships must be ready.

It is by the experience, capability, and plain old hard labor of the maintenance crews that we were able to complete our Basic training.

And so to the Maintenance crew, with fullest realization and appreciation, the classbook of 44-D is dedicated, for they are the nucleus of the flight-line, they are the backbone of our flight program.

Class 44-D

To Class of 44-D:

As you carry on with your training program, so diligently executed at this point, you are instructed to continue that sincere effort, now demonstrated by your entire class, to perfect yourselves individually in the soldierly qualities which combine to indicate Leadership.

You are reminded, as potential officers of the United States Army Air Corps, that the effectiveness of our greatest effort depends upon the qualities of its leadership more than upon any other factor; that your ultimate ability as leaders will determine victory or defeat; that you will be required to demonstrate ever increasing qualities of self-control, self-study, and self-sacrifice in addition to initiative, resourcefulness, and outstanding flying ability.

I have complete confidence in your sincere desire to pursue these objectives and follow the high examples, already well established, by so many of your predecessors at Polaris, to the end that posterity will ever cherish the liberty you so nobly will have preserved for all.

ARTHUR S. BLUM, JR.
Major, Air Corps
Commanding

Men of Class 44-D:

The fine spirit shown by your class pronounces you as one of the best classes in the history of this school.

Your training progress has been very similar to that of a baseball player. In College Training Detachment you were given the basic fundamentals of a good soldier or a Class "D" baseball player. In Pre-Flight you were beginning to practice your past teachings and get eager as a young ball player would after being given a personal interview by a big league scout. In primary you were actually flying, testing your skill and ability. Many of your friends fell by the wayside, however they will join you again as mechanics, bombardiers, or in some other very essential type of work. Then you were ready for the big opportunity, Basic was coming soon, where the men are separated from the boys. Gentlemen, this deciding phase has been completed, only the men are left, you are now ready for Advance. Upon completion you will be in the big leagues. Heretofore the game has been young and no competition to face. When you graduate don't let down or relax for our big inning is coming soon. With men like you in the air we will celebrate Hitler's funeral in Berlin in 1944! Let's remember that our superiors want the best Flying Officers and not just flyers. Good luck and God Bless You.

HERBERT G. BENCH
1st Lt., Air Corps
Commandant of Cadets

Mr. H. G. Reynolds
Field Commander

To: The Class of 44-D

With the graduation of 44-D, we of Polaris Flight Academy have the opportunity of realizing a long cherished ambition. You have set a record here at Lancaster that in itself is nothing short of amazing. However, we are going to ask even more of you. This Class has an excellent chance to graduate for the first time in history—every member of the Class—A 100% graduation, out of your Advanced School. Pride in your fine Class—Pride in yourselves—and Pride in achievement—the Pride that has carried you thus far—makes such a goal possible for you to attain.

It is a pleasure for Polaris Flight Instructors to work with a good Class—You have been a good Class and I heartily congratulate each and every one of you. I sincerely hope that continued success will follow you throughout your flying career,—and always remember—LOOK AROUND.

CADET DETACHMENT

When you see the newest gig list, turn to the left and you are in the Commandant of Cadets' office, although more than gigs come from the desks expertly filled by Lt. Bench, Commandant, Lt. Jessen, Lt. Jensen, Lt. Kirkpatrick, and Lt. Jones. There is the steady flow of material that keeps a cadet detachment running smoothly, all strengthened by the determination that these present cadets will be officers worthy of the name.

Every way that life at Polaris touches a cadet, the office of the Commandant of Cadets will be the controlling factor from getting shoes re-soled (tours are a curious compunction) to getting a four day pass—one was issued, it is said, to a cadet in '08.

Adjoining this hub of cadet life is the Cadet O. D. office from which emanate the strident tones, usually in a Missouri twang, informing the cadets that taps really has blown, or in the morning that lights really must go on. The Cadet OD is the liaison between the office next door and the world outside, for here are kept the sign out books, sainted in memory.

Lt. R. F. Jensen

Lt. H. H. Kirkpatrick

Lt. B. E. Jones

Men of 44-D

I wish to write a few words which represent the opinions of many who have supervised your training at War Eagle Field.

Here we have seen many classes pass on, but every one possesses, uncannily, a certain character: traits which differ it from all the others. As a class you have been distinguished by your cooperative spirit, your willing attitude and, above all, your inherent desire to fly. This last remark has subconsciously asserted itself by the fact your elimination rate has been remarkably low. Your spirit and attitude have shown themselves by the way you have responded to the Regulations and instructions given you. Never lose your discipline, so vitally necessary!

A short nine weeks separates you from your goal of silver wings and desire to make these seemingly magical wings work for you. But be smart—fly as you have been taught: fly by the Rules and Regulations laid down by men who have found through painful learning that man, with flying machines, makes mistakes.

My sincere Congratulations to you and I wish you all the success in the world in the Tokyo-bound rocket ships you will fly.

Ground

What happens in ground school is better in a Freudian nightmare. Clouds, it seems, have peculiar habits when confronted with a mountain, or are going over sand . . . unless there is a temperature inversion. And then, if you can see that bSB2C at a fiftieth, you won't shoot it down in a full minute. So our ground school, under the pressure of what has to be known, and how well that is known, is thorough on all facets. It is cut to the quick, stripped to the essentials, but the fundamentals remain, safety counts, and no cadet can say, "If I had but been taught."

The watchmaker, cramming sufficient springs, wheels, and "stuff" to fill the palm of his hand, probably regards with

and Staff*

sympathy and appreciation the work of the Polaris ground school instructors who pry the necessary ground school subjects into the two months' Basic course.

Every facet of aeronautics must find a cadet at least knowing what is going on; the pilot does more than fly. Navigation, Meteorology, Code, Instruments, and Aircraft Identification, all must be absorbed and culled from the incomprehensible Technical Manuals and assimilated into an already over-filled head.

And for those few cadets who are deficient in ground school courses, night classes are held by the willing instructors; they know more than anyone else that a proper understanding of the material given here is a "must" for safe flying.

Hospital

Tooth-ache, headache, gastric ulcers, cut fingers, influenza, or just an average case of the plane punchy stomach, these are the happy hunting grounds of the Polaris hospital headed by Flight Surgeon Capt. Jenkins and Lt. Sonnenberg. These two lease-lending willing ears to keep our little cheeks rosy, and our little tongues clear and quelling the quibbling cadets with a stern "No, you will have to go to PT."

Teeth, too, come in for their attention, and many are the grim faced cadets coming out with gaps, or without gaps as the case may be—for the post dentist, Capt. Leal, can detect an ailing tooth as well as the rest of the staff can detect an ailing cadet, habitual or otherwise.

Link

Needle, ball, airspeed, needle, ball, airspeed, with an artificial horizon thrown in to make the measure complete, means Link trainer, an instrument of torture that keeps our life from getting dull, and makes a cadet simply thirst for clouds to prove his prowess.

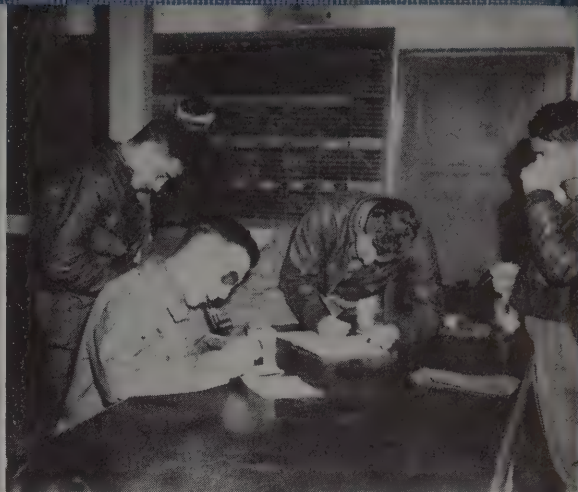

At Polaris we are doubly fortunate in having manageable link instructors and unmanageable links, for learning a link depends upon the difficulty, of which we have the maximum.

Link Instructors

Here the home of the happy pilot where the instructors are boss and the cadet is—just a cadet—and the instructors are glad of it. Scarcely the right surroundings for future wearers of the proud silver wings, but here we are poured into the mold for that future fighting team second to none.

Home, too, for many a tour caused by those little items of neglect that may all add up someday.

The ready room and the flight line is yet another class room, a class room of flight conducted with the same view in mind, so what mind the occasional bite?

Our barracks are where with joy sublime we engage in the age old Army game of sack-time, or wax the floors, or clean the latrines, or fold laundry, or bum cigarettes, or standby for inspections, here, even, sometimes we study. These are our homes, and though through palaces we may wander, this will still be the place where we wax floors, or get sack-time, or clean latrines, or fold laundry, or standby for inspections, or study and bum cigarettes; man being, along his best surfaces, an adaptable animal. A loci of formations they are; our environment, that may have its way in our lives.

Lt. Eugene S. Broadwater

T/Sgt. George W. Phelps

Sgt. Everard Jones

Under the supposition that all bodies are created with muscles, our PT periods are devoted to bringing each and every little muscle up to tone; usually screaming with agony. Under the gentle goadings of Lt. Broadwater, Sergeants Phelps and Jones, burpees and coordinated lunges keep us in the pink, from over-exertion, for modern aerial warfare gets the most, whether we ache or not.
